Showcase highlights Cambridge as unique location for business events

Over 80 event organisers from a wide range of sectors, including academic institutions, regional and national companies, agents and representatives from charities, associations and government departments flocked to Meet in Cambridge held at Robinson College recently.

The event provided the opportunity to see 30 academic venues in one place, on one day, and underlined the unique position Cambridge holds as a prestigious and attractive location for business.

Meet in Cambridge is an annual event organised by Conference Cambridge, the official free venue finding service for Cambridge University and the Colleges.

A perfect setting

Robinson's state-of-the-art auditorium provided the perfect setting for the introductory presentations given by industry specialists on current 'hot event topics' including sponsorship, use of social media, sustainability and how to harness the latest AV technology.

Attendees were then invited to look around the stands of the 30 participating venues in the College's Dining Hall, so they could meet the Conference teams and enjoy refreshments along the way.

Nick Milne, Catering & Conference Manager at Robinson College said: "This year's Meet in Cambridge event highlighted once again the importance of Cambridge as a location for all types of business events, from residential conferences to one day meetings.

"Our facilities proved ideal for the event format, enabling us to showcase our auditorium for the presentation sessions and then our spacious Hall for the exhibition."

Kelly Vickers, Manager of Conference Cambridge added: "Feedback to date has been very positive, with those attending appreciating the opportunity to see so many venues in just a couple of hours and also see why Cambridge is such a unique and attractive city in which to hold events of all types.

"It was also successful for the venues. Over 50% of exhibitors responding to our post-event survey have reported receiving enquiries for day meetings, private dining, residential conferences and summer schools."
