
German – Post A Level: Preparation for Study

Although it may still seem a long way ahead, study at Cambridge is an intensive business, so it is vital that you get off to a good start by preparing in advance as much as possible – and especially so since you have chosen to study German ab initio.

Please read carefully the information provided by the Faculty for ab initio students in German:

In particular, you should take careful note of the recommended materials which will help you prepare for the course, and make sure that you complete at least the chapters set for study before you arrive. It is very important that you start to familiarize yourself with the language and its forms before you arrive in Cambridge, because you will find the pace of study here very swift.

If you have any questions relating to the German aspect of your course here, please contact the person listed as Course Adviser at the bottom of the webpage, as they will be able to give the best advice on the beginners' course and how to prepare for it.
